

Having children ages 7, 5, and 3 I am bombarded with questions... "What does that word mean? Why are they being mean (violent) to each other? I just saw her underwear." Why does a parent have to answer these questions. Violence, sex and profanity are things that I constantly have anxiety about when the TV is on. I stay in the same room and have to constantly monitor it. Even the childrens Saturday morning cartoons are not safe anymore. I sat down and payed attention to one show about the little girl following her dad because she thought he was having an affair and "stepping out on her mom" and "getting it on with someone else". Why do my children need to be educated on these matters? I dont want them to be nor do I appreciate this content. I wish it would change however as I write this I know it is in vain. But I have heard comments on the local news lately in regards to the horrific matters of the Super Bowl that the polls that were taken were biased. Well, I am here to tell you they were not. There is absolutely too much sex, violence and profanity.
